WM. HOWARD IS SERIOUSLY SHOT AND DRY DETECTIVE BADLY HURT AS RESULT OF RAIDS FRIDAY

Clash Occurs in West End and Also at Bolton's Place on South Third Street

Warrants Served on Eight of "Dry" Officers and Men are Lodged in Prison

Possession of Three Places Taken and Bartender Richards Handcuffed for Two Hours---Crowds On Outside---Serious Clashes Follow

Force of About 30 Men Arrive From Cleveland and Proceed to Act Under Search Seizure Law ---Excitement Runs High.

As a result of the visit of the "Dry" detectives to this city today, Wm. Howard, proprietor of the Last Chance and a former city patrolman, lies at the Newark Sanitarium in a precarious condition, having been shot just below the heart with a 44 caliber revolver in the hands of Carl Etherington, a dry detective, from Harrisburg, Ky., employed by the Anti-Saloon league in the search and seizure of near beer saloons.

For the last few days the air has been full of rumors that a large number of dry detectives were being held in readiness in Columbus by the Anti-Saloon League for the purpose of coming to Newark at a moment's notice and making a raid on the places where alleged violations of the local option law were being made. It was reported that detectives from Cleveland and other places had rendezvoused in Columbus to the number of over 100 and that they were prepared for any emergency.

Friday morning at an early hour about 20 of these men swooped down on Newark, it is said, in charge of Ed. Hill, of Columbus, armed with search and seizure warrants.

Upon their arrival in the city they divided into squads, four of them going to the place of Charles Henry, who is absent from the city, being in the west, having attended the Jeffries-Johnson prize fight, and leaving the place in charge of his employees. It is said that no resistance was offered here and that some goods were found.

Eight of the men went to the place of Lewis Bolton, on South Third street, and as Mr. Hill was engaged in reading the warrant to Mr. McKenna, some one struck him over the right eye, badly cutting and bruising it, causing the blood to run in streams down his shirt front and over his clothes. For a time it looked as though some one would be killed or seriously injured, as guns were drawn and the detectives began firing promiscuously at the employees of the place. Fortunately none of the shots took effect. Some of the pals of Mr. Hill rushed him from the place and took him to the sheriff's office, where his wounds were dressed by Dr. J. P. H. Stedem.

An Advocate reporter happened to be in the sheriff's office when the detectives came in. He was careless and huffy. He washed the blood from his face and telephoned for Dr. Stedem, who quickly responded and dressed his wounds. To the reporter Mr. Hill said that the men were working under instructions from the Anti-Saloon League, and that they had visited Charles Henry's place, where they had no trouble. He said that when he entered Bolton's place there were a number of men present, but that when he started to read the warrant to Mr. McKenna, the bartender, some one called to him, and as he turned around he was struck a terrific blow over the eye, which, however, failed to stagger him, and he reached for his gun, but thought better of it and refrained from doing so. He refused at first to tell his name or the names of his associates, but finally said his name was Ed Hill and that he was from Columbus. He refused to talk further, but said that there was much to tell, which he would communicate later.

The city police department was ready to lend any assistance necessary for the protection of life and property. While the mob surged in front of the Schlegel place on West Main street, Chief Zergibel, Wagonman Sutton and Patrolman Burke immediately took positions in front of the door and succeeded in quieting the crowd.

The chief demanded entrance to the saloon, which was granted, and he immediately asked the detectives in charge for their papers authorizing him to seize the place. He was given the affidavits and warrants hands of Chief Zergibel, charging the men in the Schlegel saloon with assault and battery.

The document was known as a Joe Doe warrant, none of the names of the detectives being known. It was signed by William McKinley and immediately upon receiving the warrant the chief ordered out the patrol wagon and at once went to the Schlegel place and took the men into custody. Wagonman Sutton and Patrolman Burke were the chief's assistants.

The charge against the men was assault and battery, the assault being in that they kept Charles Richards handcuffed in the saloon for two hours.

Those who were arrested gave their names at the city prison as Edward Kilbourn, Otto Truack, W. H. Proper, Root, Burleigh, C. Cundell, E. Watson, J. H. Snyder and G. Crowmer, all giving their places of residence as Cleveland. Guns, cartridges and blackjacks were found on all of the men.

The wagon had no sooner returned to the Fourth street station than another outbreak occurred on West Main street, across from the Advocate, when a number of the bystanders were tipped off by some one that a passing pedestrian was one of the detectives who were in the Henry saloon. Immediately cries of "There goes one of them" and "Hang him!" "Get him," etc., were raised. He started to run west on Main street, but was overtaken just in front of the market house. He was knocked down by a vicious blow in the face and the crowd immediately set upon him and beat him up in bad shape.

A newspaper man at the patrol station saw the gang and reported the trouble to the chief and Chief Zergibel and Wagonman Driver. Bob Francis hurried to the scene of the riot and took the man into custody to save him from the mob.

He was taken to the patrol station through the angry crowd, while cries of "Hang him," "Kill him," "Beat him up," and other threatening remarks reached the trembling man's ears. He was thoroughly frightened and trembled like a leaf, while the blood ran in streams from his nose and mouth.

He was taken to the city prison, where he gave the name of James Henderson and his home as Columbus. He had an empty holster on a belt and five 38-caliber cartridges in his pockets. He had no gun and no blackjack or other weapon. It is believed he dumped his artillery before he was captured.

WILLIAM HOWARD SHOT

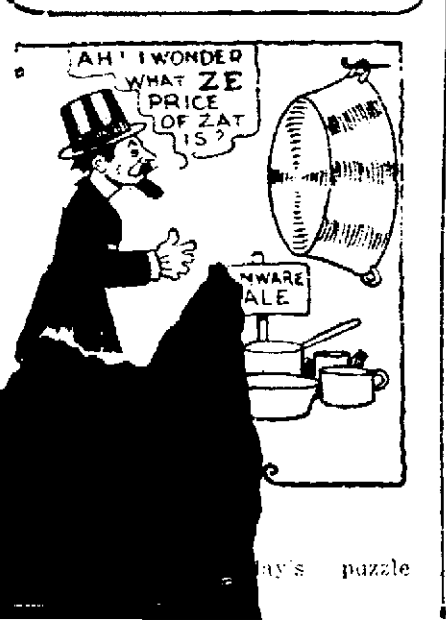

As a result of the disturbances in Newark Friday occasioned by the raid of dry detectives on alleged violators of the local option law, in addition to the numerous persons who were injured, William Howard, an ex-policeman of this city, who has been conducting the Last Chance restaurant near Rigel Park, is at the Sanitarium, suffering with a probably fatal wound inflicted by a dry detective.

Following the raid by the detectives on the downtown restaurants, several of the detectives visited the restaurant of Mr. Howard about 1 o'clock Friday afternoon and informed Mr. Howard that they were about to search the place. Mr. Howard protested, when they got into an argument, during which Carl M. Etherington, one of the detectives, drew a heavy 44-caliber Colt's revolver and pressing it to Mr. Howard's abdomen, fired, the bullet cutting its way through the flesh and making a large and ugly wound from which the blood poured in streams.

Immediately after the shooting Etherington started to run away from the place and started west, but he had not run more than a couple of hundred yards when he was stopped by two men, one of whom, Ed Cavis, took his gun away from him. Etherington then staggered down the road and met the patrol wagon, which had been sent out with a number of officers to capture him. He was taken in charge and was hurried to the county jail.

CROWD ASSEMBLED AT ADVOCATE TO HEAR FIGHT NEWS ON JULY 4TH

Here is part of the crowd assembling from the south sidewalk to the car tracks in the center of the street. Fully as many more people were crowded into the street north of the tracks.

The fight returns were read through a megaphone not from the wire, the service coming over United Press leased wires from the rig-side. Through the Advocate the people knew the result of the Reno battle two minutes after the decision in the ring. A few minutes later the Advocate "extra" in two colors appeared on the street and several thousand copies of the paper found ready sale both here and at Buckeye Lake, where the Advocate beat the Columbus papers by a full half hour.

COLUMBUS MAN FOUND MURDERED

Gruesome Find Made by Fishermen at the Storage Dam

BODY BADLY DECOMPOSED

Victim Had Lost Leg in Railroad Accident---Nephew of State Senator Gillett.

Columbus, July 8.—Bandits murdered and robbed A. B. Gillett, 236 South Front street, former railroad man, whose body was found under a tree near the terminus of the Columbus, Urbana and Western Interurban railway at the storage dam at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The discovery was made by two fishermen.

Evidence found by Coroner Hanes shows that the man was beaten to death and his body dragged to the lonely spot under the drooping branches of a tree probably some 100 feet from the roadway along the river. It was supposed the murder was committed for gain, as only a cheap belt knife was found on the body, but the brother of the dead man said that he had no money on him, and that he had no valuables.

The body was found in a pool of blood, and the blood was still fresh. The body was badly decomposed, and the face was unrecognizable. The only point adding the identification was the fact that his left leg was missing, its place being taken by an artificial leg.

Gillett lived with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Gillett, at 236 South Front street. He also has a brother, C. F. Gillett. He was a nephew of State Senator Gillett of Lancaster.

He had not been working for some time, and left home at 5:30 Tuesday morning without saying where he was going. His father and brother had been searching for him since Tuesday night, and last night, after scouring all parts of the city, had made up their minds to report to the police this morning that he was missing.

JOHNSON GETS BIG RECEPTION

Dusky Champion Welcomed by Thousands Upon Arrival Home

BROUGHT SAME SMILE Which He Wore in the Ring at Reno---To Get $5,000 Per Week in Vaudeville.

July 8.—The noisiest reception ever accorded to one of his race was the portion of Jack Johnson yesterday afternoon when he returned from Reno the acknowledged world's champion fighting man.

For the first time since he entered the Reno arena with Jeffries, he heard thousands endeavor their vocal chords in a mighty shout of "Oh, you Johnson."

Two thirds of the 7000 men and women who waited for him at the Northwestern Station were of his own color. They led the applause and the cheering and the wild stampeding for the man of the hour.

The white third of the crowd, however, joined in the noise, laughed at the fighter's witty remarks, and not a whit less able of foot following him. Once apprehensions of race trouble proved to be entirely unfounded. There was not a single nasty remark hurled at the big negro.

Nor was there the slightest aftermath of trouble. The crowd, black and white, speedily went their several ways discussing Johnson and the fight without regard to race sentiment. Perhaps the big fellow's smile had something to do with the general atmosphere of peace.

The Overland Limited, with Johnson's private car Redondo in the middle of the train, rolled into the station at 2 o'clock. A telegram from the reception committee of the Johnson Welcome Homers reached the fighter at West Chicago and warned him of the big crowds.

"Flanagan, you'll have to take care of my wife," said Johnson to the jolly Canadian, who ceased to be his manager at the end of the Reno battle. "I'll never be able to get her through the crowd and save the hairpins."

Accordingly, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Sig Hart and Flanagan went to the dining room and were the first to leave the train. They edged their way through the crowd unknown.

It was different when the "big snake" came. The crowd set up a howl of delight at the first sight of him. The police were brushed aside like reppins when a strike is called. Likewise the official reception committee which had been standing in frock coats under silk hats for two hours. In a minute Johnson was the center of a laughing, shouting, hysterical glad mob of his own people.

The police rescued him with a fighting wedge, but they could not get him across Wells street to his automobile. They shipped him into a cab and drove him across river, where he finally found a automobile.

Meantime the 35 automobiles that were to have been his unofficial parade, the police having refused a permit for a regular band-led procession, scurried out south with 2341 Wabash avenue, the home of Jack's aged mother, as their mecca. Michigan avenue curbs were lined with interested white spectators for a dozen blocks.

The block in which Johnson lives was black with people in more senses than one. The house, trees and electric poles were draped with colored humanity.

In Mrs. Johnson's front yard the Eighth Regiment Band lay in wait, and as Jack arrived it turned loose the merry strains of "This Ain't No Place for a Minister's Son." There was a drum major in gorgeous uniform to march him under the

WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

Grew a Full Growth of Hair on a Bald Head

Here's the Proof

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin, and now it has grown back again. I am now a full head of hair. I have used Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. The first bottle seemed to do some good and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now filled with hair and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

"Welcome Home" arch into the arms of his good mother.

"Mammy," he cried with a smile that threatened to divide his face, "Mammy, I'm bringing home the bacon."

Mrs. Johnson couldn't find words and tears of joy and to suffice for her welcome.

The crowd outside has kept up one continuous yell, and in order that the rest of his family greetings might be heard, Johnson appeared on the second floor balcony. He bowed awkwardly and waved a white handkerchief for five minutes.

There was a reception "strictly confined to the intimate and personal friends of the family." Later there was a public reception at the Pekin theatre, at which Johnson shook hands with thousands. In the evening Johnson visited the newspaper offices and posed for photographs illustrating the blows which destroyed Jeffries.

Today he is going to make a flying automobile trip to Milwaukee, the home of Mrs. Johnson. Saturday he will pack up his outfit, including an automobile—first, of course, his puttering bag and ring apparatus; his bulldogs, Farmer and Scotty.

With his smiling partner, Walter Monahan, a young white heavy-weight from San Francisco, he will leave Sunday afternoon on the Twentieth Century, bound for New York where he opens a roof garden engagement at 11 and a week. After giving engagements at Atlantic City and Boston, he will rest until September, spend a part of the time in Chicago, before he returns to his home.

As Johnson dashed his way into the house amid deafening roars and with real tears streaming down his face, embraced his mother, behind him a compatriot struggled through the crowd, bearing aloft a smoked bacon slice, symbolic of Johnson's own message home:

"I'm coming home with the bacon."

"You don't need no bacon, child," cried the aged Mrs. Johnson. "Ah, want to tell you I got a mighty fine chicken cooked" cut head in the kitchen, and you know how you like wa ah-mee! We all have got some dardies, Jack."

"Sam Langford!" Johnson asked.

"You make me laugh. I am not running around now looking for fights. Let Langford put up his $20,000 first, then he can talk. I got now I am going to New York Sunday afternoon to begin 30 weeks vaudeville tour—at least I have that many at my disposal. If it looks like a good thing, I may accept offers to go to Europe."

"Quit! Well, I'll tell you, sonny. I never told any one I would quit, but it looks as though I'd have to, doesn't it?"

Friday night Johnson will attend a banquet. He says he is too busy having a good time to be bothered by a repulsive suit filed yesterday by George W. Lingo, his former manager, for a $1200 diamond ring. His future plans, he says, can be outlined only generally, and this is how he generalized them:

"Sleep some, eat a pile of goat eatables, and drive his racer."

Regarding his future plans Johnson said:

"I have some good chances to go to Europe, but I think the 30 weeks in vaudeville will suit me better. Guess I will have to quit, though, whether I want to or not, won't I?"

"Did you hear about the picture men's troubles?" he was asked.

"Yes," he answered, "that is does not bother me. I was told me I was a fool to get $50,000, but they thought I was a fool."

The groom, who is a drilling contractor, is the son of Mr. M. P. Patten, a well-to-do farmer of Cranville. Mr. and Mrs. Patten accompanied by their two attendants, went to Newark, took the 1:25 train for Niagara Falls, Canada and different parts of the east.

The young couple, after remaining home will reside at Dexter City, where they expect to make their future home. They have the best wishes of their many friends for a happy and prosperous life together.

Mrs. L. M. Bradton entertained the Excelsior class of the Central Church of Christ at her home in Cranville street, Tuesday evening. An interesting program was rendered. A dainty lunch was served to the following members and guests: Messdames Farmer, Mayers, McLaren, Painter, Armstrong, Cooper, Bush, Jordan, Bradton, Bessie Porter, Elsie, Hank Smith, Beatty, Messrs. Eva and Mary Shannon. The guests of the class were the Mrs. Jewell, Messrs. E. H.

Mayers, Pauline Farmer, Chloe Brader, Esther Reese, Eva Bratton, Messrs. Farmer, Braden, Smith and Bratton.

Mrs. Ida Chase of East Main street delightfully entertained the members of her sewing club and a few friends at her home on Thursday afternoon. A pleasant afternoon was spent with the needles, followed by the serving of a dainty repast.

Mrs. Bruner of East Broad street, Columbus, entertained informally on Thursday afternoon out of compliment to her house guests, Miss Maude Lyda of Newark and Miss Margaret Moody of Lancaster. Mrs. Moody leaves soon for a trip through the west, and the party was in the nature of a farewell to her.

MERRICK CROSBY

Irvine Merrick, a glass worker, and Miss Della Crosby, both of this city, were married at Wellburg, W. Va., June 26. The couple planned to surprise their friends but the news of their wedding kept them back to Newark, though the telegraphic reports stated that they had attempted to get a license in Pittsburgh. Mr. and Mrs. Merrick will be at home at 151 Maple avenue after July 5.

Bombay Toast.—Beat well four eggs, add one half teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of chopped capers, and a dash of cayenne. In a saucepan put two tablespoonfuls of butter, and when hot stir in one tablespoonful of anchovy paste and the egg mixture. When it thickens take from the fire, spread on thin slices of buttered toast and serve at once.

Stuffed Tomato Salad.—Cut a lid from each at the stem end and remove seeds thoroughly from each. Cut the inside of each tomato with French dressing and set away on ice. Prepare a stuffing of chopped cucumbers, two cucumbers to one small green pepper, also chopped, a few pieces of finely chopped onion, and mix it all with mayonnaise. With this fill the tomatoes, put the cover on each, and serve very cold.

FOULARD AFTERNOON GOWN.

Foulard is holding its own, and is tremendously well liked for semi-dress gowns, and above model in two shades of rose is desirable and pretty. The design is fairly simple and never beyond the possibilities of a clever home seamstress. All over cream lace is used for yoke and tops of sleeves, which are cut in one piece, and the lace band bordering each is dyed to match the ground of silk. The draping of tunic at right side is especially attractive.

Vacation time is here. Are you in need of a case or traveling bag? If so, see our line—it is the most complete. Mitchell & Miracle, E. Side Square. 842

POSED AS MAN FOR 30 YEARS

London, July 3.—The officials who conducted the inquest into the death of Harry Lloyd, a strange woman who for 30 years posed as the husband of her sister expressed the opinion today that the woman had practiced the deception to save the honor of her sister and of the latter's daughter. The inquest developed with practical certainty that "Harry Lloyd" was Mary Leroy, the daughter of a Belgian army officer. They came to London nearly 30 years ago and earned their living by teaching languages. Thirty years ago, Harry Leroy dropped out of sight and Harry Lloyd appeared. Inquiries were made for Miss Leroy, but no one knew where she was and she was soon forgotten. Harry Lloyd was a teacher of languages. He lived with his wife, Eliza Lloyd. A child was born to Eliza Lloyd shortly after their appearance in London. The mother died 20 years ago and "Father" and daughter continued to live together. No one guessed, not even the child, Elizabeth, that Harry Lloyd and Mary Leroy were one and the same, but the inquest has developed the dual identity. Harry Lloyd was 73 years old when she died.

When the lightning strikes there is no necessity for arbitration.

Husband and Wife Confidences.

"It seems to me, dear, you love me just because I am pretty," she was saying. "You like the pink of my cheeks, my blue eyes, my gold hair. Yet these aren't me, to be ungrammatical, I would be the same if my face were freckled, my eyes a fiery gray, and my hair red, though I think red hair is pretty. Now would you, dear?"

He said she was adorable, no matter what she looked like.

But she wasn't quite satisfied. "I want you to love me," she went on, "the real me, not my looks—my physical self, as it were. And don't you think I, the real I, have improved under the inspiration of your companionship?"

"You couldn't improve," he averred. "Now, please, be sensible. I don't want compliments. Tell me really."

"Well, dear, you have. You are growing more and more unselfish; too unselfish, sometimes, I think. You are less opinionated, that is, you have come to realize that other people can differ with you and yet perhaps also be right. You are ever so much more thoughtful in little things. You are sweeter and more lovable in hundreds of ways. I didn't think you could be, but you are. There, now, is that the way you wanted me to put you under the microscope?"

"Yes, dear, it is. And this growth is what marriage should accomplish. It should make one finer in every way. It would be a failure if it didn't. It isn't meant, I think, to make one simply happy. It is meant to help one grow better and finer. Don't you? And now, I am going to tell you how you have improved."

"You are ever so much more gentle than you used to be. If men only knew how women love gentleness and tenderness in men, I think they would cultivate these qualities

HOW TO CURE ECZEMA, PIMPLES, AND DANDRUFF.

We desire to say that when we took the agency for ZEMO, we were convinced that it was a valuable remedy for Eczema, pimples and dandruff. Yet, we must frankly admit that Zemo has far exceeded our expectations as a treatment for skin diseases. We are pleased to state that we shall continue the agency as ZEMO has given splendid results wherever recommended. Our customers like ZEMO too, because it is a clean vegetable liquid for external use.

ZEMO effects its cures by drawing to the surface of the skin and destroying the germ life that causes the disease, leaving the skin clear and healthy. It does not soil the clothing or linen and can be used freely on infants.

With every purchase we give a booklet on skin diseases explaining in simple words how any person can be cured at home of any form of skin or scalp diseases by this clean, scientific remedy. T. J. Evans' druggist.

BLUE AND WHITE.

This is a charming design for striped effects, which are shown in profusion in all sorts of materials. An attractive model recently seen was blue and white, and the pointed tunic had a band of plain blue satin around bottom. This same satin was used for bodice trimming and girde in connection with white lace, which formed the ripple collar and cascade down front.

MOCK BEEFSTEAK.

How to Make and Serve the Dish in Attractive Ways.

In these days of high prices a mock beefsteak is an acceptable substitute for the genuine one. The housekeeper should try molding her "Hamburg steak" into less commonplace forms. Often the beef is molded somewhat like an ordinary beefsteak. The platter should be prettily garnished with parsley and lemon, or it may be decorated after the manner of a "planked" steak, with a border of mashed potato an djust enough baked tomatoes or stuffed green peppers to serve one to each person at the table.

Another appropriate platter decoration is easily accomplished by heaping little piles of particolor vegetables at intervals around the mock beefsteak. Potato balls, diced carrots and string beans are a favorite combination of color and transform the humble "Hamburg steak" into quite a festive dish.

Another way is to have the chopped beef shaped into the form of lamb chops, each decorated with a frill of tissue paper fastened to a toothpick. These may be made by the children of the household in the evenings, and as they cost nothing and give a decided air of daintiness to the simplest dish they are well worth while. Often these little imitation chops are arranged to stand on a bed of parsley and rest against a pretty bowl filled with stewed tomato. A spoonful of the tomato should be served with each portion. These little chops of beef may rest on a bed of mashed potatoes if preferred, or it is a pretty idea to place a baked potato between each chop just before serving, gently open each potato and place a piece of butter in the opening.

Another attractive way of serving the same dish is to place these little chops in an overlapping row on the platter, each chop decorated as before with its little paper frill. Tomato sauce or slices of broiled fresh tomato may decorate the edge of the platter.—Delinicator.

Parson's Mossback on Suffrage.

There's a clergyman in Eng-land who does not want women to get their rights. He says so frankly and says that if women ever get them he will leave the country. He is the Rev. A. J. Waldron, vicar of Brixton. "Women want their rights," said he. "When they get them I will emigrate." He does not see why women should wish to enter politics or even want to vote. His contention is that women should remain at home, should not work for a living unless absolutely compelled to and should give up women's clubs. He says women are destined for the home and should not be permitted to vote.

ROYAL R. C. BIGBEE DESCRIBES TRIP THROUGH THE SOUTHLAND

In my early manhood it was my privilege to put in some time at Nashville, Tenn. in what seemed to me to be a futile effort to assist President Abraham Lincoln to possess, occupy and hold the property of the United States lying south of the Ohio river.

As a member of the 142nd regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, I arrived there in the early part of 1862, on a short time after General George H. (Pap) Thomas had successfully and everlastingly taken the concert out of General John S. Hood.

Ever since my discharge, which occurred in the early summer of that year, it has been my great desire to revise the city and to see it with a pair of civilian eyes hence, on the 25th day of November, 1907, in company with my son, Cecil, we left for the sunny south, arriving at the capital of Tennessee on the following morning and at once sought a place to stop while there and found such a place in the Maxwell house. We were somewhat partial to this hotel for we knew from its location that it must be what was called "beto the wall," the Zolliecoffer House, and was used as an army headquarters constantly after the capture of the city until the close of the war. The original owner, General Zolliecoffer, held an official position in the Confederate army, and was killed in battle in the very early part of the war.

One of the first places of interest that we visited, was the capital building, which is situated on the highest ground in the city, and which was built about 1855, the material used in its construction being Tennessee marble. The structure at that time was said to be one of the finest, if not the finest, central building in the United States but it has faded and now it looks as though, if it were human, it could feel no stretch of imagination to say "did you notice how wrinkled she is?"

Our arrival at the capital, the first man we met, changed to be the Hon. John W. Morton, secretary of state, and to him we related why we were here, and that we wished to renew our acquaintance with the places about the city, that we knew in our boyhood days. Secretary Morton proved to have been in the Confederate army, and was captured in the second Bull Run battle, and was held as a prisoner of war at Camp Chase and at Johnson's Island. His lieutenant's sword which he surrendered at the time was, but a few years ago returned to him by the identical Union officer to whom he surrendered it, and now it, and many other remembrances of his personal experience in the blood conflict are kept in a relic case in the secretary's office.

In this building, and about the governor's house, which at that time was located just across the street, we have done grand duty a great many days, and have slept in every room in the capital, for at that time it was used as headquarters for the guard.

Then, there was nothing permanent on the capital ground but the building, now a splendid monument to General Jackson, and the tomb of President James K. Polk, occupy a place on the hill and besides the building. On my first acquaintance with the place there was plenty of artillery all about the capital, and one gun had been hoisted up and occupied a very commanding position on top of the building.

The architect who had the planning and construction of the capital, was named Strickland, and died while it was being built, and his body, together with the body of his pet dog was entombed, on April 7, 1855 in one of the massive columns of the building, something after the fashion of dispoing of bodies in New Orleans.

In the archives of the State house, we saw a paper dated in 1798 and signed by J. Savier, governor of the State of Franklin, which was afterwards changed to Tennessee. We also saw a petition with ten thousand names attached, and dated in 1835, asking that the slaves be set free in Tennessee. What a fearful mistake was made in not listening to the prayer of those petitioners as that would have been the ending wedge towards avoiding the great civil war. We were shown through this department by a very bright and genteel young man, who said his name was Robert Quantrell. This name sent a chill of magnificent proportions along our spinal column, and we inquired if he was any relation to the notorious border ruffian of the early 1850s, and the unprincipled guerrilla of that name, of civil war memories, and very unkindly informed that he had the honor to be that man's grandson, and then we retired to a secluded part of the historic building to say something.

In our talk with Secretary Morton, we mentioned the fact that we wished to visit the site of Fort Negley, and the line of the Union earthworks which ran west from the fort, and would lead us to how we could best get there. Mr. Morton kindly offered to have a conveyance sent in from his country home, and said that he would take us where we wanted to go and that we had by this time found that he had been chief of artillery in the Confederate army at the time of the battle here, and was well equipped to give us information as we proceeded, we accepted his kind invitation, and soon were on our tour of inspection, but when we got out a where the old line of works had been in the long line ago we found that the city had built out that far and even beyond, and that all of the ground that we were so well acquainted with in our young manhood days, was now entirely covered with magnificent suburban homes. However, Fort Negley, which was situated on the apex of a hill, of the sugar loaf variety, and about 150 feet high, was still there, and it is no trouble to trace the lines of the old works, although the ground has naturally crumbled away and the banks that were used to protect the immense guns, are but little more than two and a half feet high now, and we thought that in another forty-two years there will not be enough left of the old works, to remain any of the old soldiers that there was ever a fort there, and then it was not difficult to think that in a great deal less than that length of time there would not be any of the old boys left to be reminded of anything.

About a half mile from this and directly across the open country is another hill, and on this the Confederates had a large fort, which they called Fort Zolliecoffer. Many a terrible artillery duel has been fought on these great heights, but after the battle in December 1861, there was no further use for Fort Zolliecoffer, and the squad showed, but little more for Fort Negley. Fort Zolliecoffer, however, has really "beaten his swords into plowshares, and his spears into pruning hooks," for the site of the old fort is now occupied by the municipal water works reservoir, but attention was called to the fact that the water was only used for fire and laundry purposes.

We drive on from here and finally stop at the magnificent country home of Secretary Morton and are shown the marks of cannon shots on the foundation of that house, which were fired from a Confederate at a Union battery, that was located just beside his house. The Confederate battery, at the time, was under the direct command of General Forest's Chief of Artillery Captain John W. Morton, our friend and gentlemanly host. Although he capt in was unquestionably on the wrong side in the great American conflict, "He's a gentleman for a' that."

Now as it is getting nearly night we go back to the city, and on our arrival there we go to supper in the basement of a ten story building of the First National bank, and however much we try to forget it we find that it is just simply impossible for us to keep from remembering one other time, when we were temporarily living here, and our boyhood stomachs had some slightly rebellious at the old city bean, and that part of the tenable bog that hangs nearest the ground, and we went to a restaurant near this same spot, and ordered a dinner such as we imagined that our mother would prepare for us if we were at home, and that we got all that we ordered, and then some, for we discovered before we were through eating that we had been poisoned, but managed to get back to camp and were in the hospital for several days. After this experience, I was perfectly willing to pin my faith to the little "Army bean, good old bean. Neat and clean army bean."

At the time we arrived here a day or two ago, the city was fast filling with delegates of some ladies society, which were holding a national convention of their cult of this place, and they, like us, chose the Maxwell House, as their headquarters. (I am perfectly willing to affirm with uplifted hands, that there was no collision between ourselves and any of the delegates, as to our meeting here, and to solemnly aver that the whole thing was an accident, if that will do any good, but maybe it will not.)

The illustrious "Carrie Nation" and her little batchet, was among the delegates, and all went fairly smooth until Carrie's feminine curiosity, just simply compelled her to open a door that ought not to have opened, when, Shades of Lorenzo Dow, the fatal door was the one that opened directly into the bar room. At this point the fountain of her great deep were loosed, and she poured forth perfect torrents of language, of the kind and character peculiar only to the redoubtable Carrie.

But, thanks to the proper persons who were there, this storm came to an end and after she had informed the proprietor of the house, that she would stop no longer there unless he would at once close the bar. This demand was made at an emphasized by the vigorous stamping of her number ten shoes on the marble floor of the bar. Our language is not very courteous, but we plainly heard him tell her that there were other hotels in Nashville, or which she could stop, if she didn't like the Maxwell.

From here we go south on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, about 19 miles out we pass through Franklin and notice from the car window that there are still some of the hastily constructed earth works, but vividly remind us of the extremely hard battle that was fought here in November, 1862.

By reference to a diary, I am reminded that the day was fine and that the farms are kept in and look as most as new and as fertile as do the Ohio farms, although the farm buildings are of the old-fashioned type with the porch spanning entire around the houses. As we near De Cadeville, which is perhaps 150 miles from Nashville, the country begins to have the appearance of being very poor, and as though it was nonproductive of everything, but colored people.

At Montgomery, Va. a gentleman, I decided the train and in his conversation we soon found that he was a direct descendant of the soap and suds of Sam Houston. He told us why the secession Sam was unsuccessful, but his wife, after he was a sudden, resigned the office of Governor of Tennessee, but as his sympathy appears to be about in favor of the Houston tribe, and he witnesses for the defense are not prepared to testify in the case, we really drop the matter without prejudice.

At Scranton, Miss. we leave the train and will take an early morning train on a trolley car out about 12 miles for the purpose of visiting a large vineyard of which we have heard much, for we had been offered our expenses if we would visit the place, and buy some stock in the concern. We found it quite a curiosity, but not of sufficient financial promise to justify an investment. The grapes are mostly of the old Escapenough variety and of a delicious flavor. The vines are allowed to grow up like trees to about the height of 3 feet, and then they are allowed to spread over a space of 3 feet square, and each vine so arranged will, so they said produce from thirty-three to forty bushels of the most delicious grapes, and each bushel will afford 3 gallons of pure juice, and this ranges from $1 to $3 per gallon, according to age. The proprietor, Mr. Bellias, says that 1,000 gallons per acre would be a very conservative estimate, as to production. We ate dinner here and although we had grapes and stewed peas direct from their own "vine and fig trees," the mess was put to us in such an unpalatable condition that we were glad to get away and back to Scranton. When we arrived here, the landlord and his wife, and they were both smooth salve spreaders, said that they would have an abundance of time to prepare us any kind of supper that we desired, and so we said high potatoes boiled with the buckets on, would we thought fill a long felt want with us. Of course we had in mind the delicious tubers of Ohio, and after waiting an extremely long time, supper was announced, and we went in to find that the trait of the serpent was over the whole of it. "The potatoes for which we were 'an hungared,'" were not even half cooked and the butter smelled to heaven, and might have been good in its youth, but alas, not now. The coffee, well whatever they could have put into the coffee to make it as black as it was, unless indeed it was more coffee, was a mystery to me, so we adjourned our hunger until we should reach the Crescent City, for there the Pullman conductor told us we could go to Frabacher's and far, sumptuously every day, and we did.

Among the many places of interest that we will visit in New Orleans will be the old Spanish Calildo, which is a very large building, and built by the Spaniards nearly 125 years ago, and was used by them as their public or state building, and in it Spain ceded to France and they to the United States in 1803, the Province of Louisiana. The old edificio, while an old building, has but few wrinkles, and on the whole has the appearance of being comparatively new.

Just across the street is Jackson Square, and as its name implies, occupies an entire city square, and is flanked with many kinds of tropical plants. In the center of the enclosure is a fine equestrian monument of "Old Hickory" with the appropriate inscription on the base. "The Union Just and Shall be Preserved." What a pity that his mantle did not fall onto one of our statesmen of somewhat later date.

We will now visit the place where the A. R. contrabands are laid to rest, when they have done with the turmoil and strife of life. We find this place situated about three or four miles from the city, and just beside, and considerably below the surface of the water to the river, and although it is a beautiful place, we can hardly understand why it should be a suitable place for a burying ground, on account of the natural drainage from the river, however, the government has also selected this place for a burial ground for those of its soldiers and sailors who die here or hereabout, and as Uncle Sam very seldom makes mistakes in matters of this kind, we withdrew our objection and will proceed with an improper description of the place. As we walk along the driveway, we notice quite an imposing monument just ahead of us, and learn that it was erected by

Daddy's Bedtime Story— A Strange Partnership

It Was Funny to See the Big Mamma Cat and the Big Mamma Hen Walking Along

O H. daddy," said Evelyn one evening when she and Jack were seated on daddy's knees ready for their bedtime story, "I saw the cutest thing today!"

"What was it, dear?" asked daddy.

"It was a mother hen and a brood of little yellow chickens. They looked just like little balls of feathers running about. They went too near a pond, and it was very funny to see the mother hen scold them and drive them away from the water."

"Mother hens are very careful of their chicks," said daddy. "Once there was an old mother hen who made an agreement with a cat to help her take care of her little ones."

"Jack and Evelyn thought they would like to hear the story.

"It was this way," began daddy. "The hen was a black Spanish hen, and the cat was a Maltese cat. The cat had four tiny, pretty kittens which were about three weeks old when the mother cat became acquainted with the hen. The hen had a brood of little chickens, eight of them in all, and all too small to take care of themselves. The two families lived together in a big chicken coop on a farm, and they got along together very well. The mother cat was very careful not to hurt the little chicks, and the hen would not peck at any of the kittens if they came near her own little ones."

"The presence of the cat in the coop was a very good thing for the little chickens, for while the cat was there no rats could bother the hen's family. Rats, you must know, are very fond of little chickens and will kill and eat them whenever they have a chance. The farmers have a hard time sometimes keeping the rats away from the broods. If any rat did try to get at the little brood of chickens I am telling you about—pop—out would jump the mother cat, and then in a short time there would be one less rat."

"On the other hand, it was a good thing for the cat to live so near the chickens. She did not have to hunt for rats to eat. The presence of the chickens there attracted the rats, so that the cat was saved the bother and trouble of hunting for rats to eat. Instead of that the rats would come to her. She was a very good rat catcher, and none of the rats was ever able to get at any of the little chicks."

"In the daytime the cat would go with the mother hen and her chicks when they went out, guarding them from animals that might try to hurt them. It was a funny sight to see big mamma cat and big mamma hen walking along keeping their eyes on their little ones."

where he was safely lodged in one of the cells, notwithstanding the fact that fully 2000 people were in the streets, clamoring for blood.

After Edmondson had been safely landed behind the bars, the mob dispersed in different directions, although many lingered about the jail for fully an hour.

An Advocate reporter, who was one of the first on the spot, was allowed to enter the jail and was taken by Sheriff Lanke to the cell where Edmondson was confined. When the reporter called the prisoner was lying on his cot, but jumped up when the sheriff called him and came to the grating.

He presented a pitiful appearance. His face was marked with a jelly and his face was dotted with blood, while his clothes were soaked in gore.

To the reporter he told the following story:

"My name is Carl M. Edmondson, and my home is in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, my postoffice address being Wilkesburg, Pa. For some time past I have been in the employ of a Pittsburgh detective agency, but I was brought recently to Columbus by a detective employed by the State Anti-Saloon league, and I have been working for him for a short time. I am also a strike breaker. I came down to Newark Friday morning with the other detectives. I went to the last chance restaurant Friday afternoon and made known my business to Mr. Howard, who grabbed me about the neck. I said, 'Leave me alone; that's all I want of you.' He struck me, when I pulled my gun and shot him. Immediately after I had used my gun I started and ran up the railroad track but had not proceeded over 150 yards when I met two fellows who demanded my gun. I surrendered it, when they beat me up in the manner you now see me in. After the men had left me I started down the tracks and met the patrol wagon and was brought to the jail."

The sheriff asked the man what he was packing so large a gun for. He replied that it was all in the business.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Ty Cobb Wants to Become a Pitcher.

Not satisfied with being called champion batter, base runner and the best right fielder in the American league, Ty Cobb of the Detroit Tigers is after more honors. The Tiger star wants to become a pitcher. Nearly every day before the game starts one can see Ty Cobb hurrying the sphere to his comrades, trying to put all kinds of twists on the ball. Some of his teammates say that with more practice Cobb will do. He has a splitter that many of the major leaguers would envy. But as Cobb is of more use to the Tigers as a right fielder, batter and base runner than he would be as a pitcher the chances are that he will never have the honor of doing duty in the box in a regular game.

To Swim English Channel.

A most determined effort will be made to swim the English channel this season. It is nearly thirty-five years since Captain Webb paddled across, and though many attempts have been made, not one man has succeeded. Of those who have tried it the best attempt stands to the credit of Jappy Wolfe, who came within a quarter of a mile of the shore and had to be pulled out of the water, being so exhausted that he could not make another stroke. Montague A. Holbein, who came almost as close as Wolfe eight years ago, is preparing for another dash.

Frank Gould on Turf.

Frank J. Gould of New York said recently that he might after all consider the private purchase of Vici Picard's two racing establishments at Dauter and Chantilly, France, together with the entire stud, which is now for sale. He will take the first opportunity to visit the stables at Danger and Chantilly. They represent an investment of several million francs. He intends to devote himself largely in the future to turf matters, but is averse to buying race horses at auction.

Penn Athletes Abroad.

N. J. Cartmell, the former champion college sprinter, and F. L. Ramsdell of Texas, the University of Pennsylvania runner who won the intercollegiate championship for 100 yards recently, are now in England, where they will meet some of the best short distance men in Europe.

Ramsdell will run several races in order to get in shape for the English championships, which will be held on July 2.

Stars Do Not Last Forever.

Having released Jim Jordan and Harry Lumley outright, the Brooklyn club has illustrated the fact that star players cannot last forever. Three years ago Manager McGraw of the giants offered $25,000 for Jordan and Lumley. President Elberts was ready to sell at that figure, but former Manager Pat Donovan blocked the deal by threatening to resign.

Barry After New Conquests.

Jim Barry, the Chicago heavy weight, who cleared $200,000 out of the battle he fought in California, is ready to take on either Jim Flynn of Pueblo, Colo., or Stanley Ketchik before any club offering the best purse. Jim says he will never fight another negro. He says they are too tough for him. That eliminates Jack Johnson.

American Horses Outclassed.

The showing made on American tracks by some of the Keene and Whitney horses raced abroad last summer explains perhaps why the American horses did not do better over on the other side. They were outclassed.

Holdman Dartmouth's Track Captain.

At a meeting of the Dartmouth track team recently Otto Ellsworth Holdman of Seattle, Wash., was elected captain for next year. Holdman has been on the team for three years and holds the college record for the pole vault.

Wreck Will Cost $150,000.

A dispatch from Middletown says that Attorney Marshall, representing the C. H. and D. was in that city seeking the cause of the wreck. He stated that the C. H. and D. Cash Register wreck on the same 4th in 1891, in which 43 people were killed, cost the road $150,000 in damages, and that the present wreck would cost as much, if not more. The whole trouble seems to be caused by the lack of a block system in the C. H. and D. yards at the Middletown station.

Mr. B. N. Austin, general passenger agent of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company, passed through the city Friday morning enroute from Chicago to Baltimore. He was accompanied by N. C. Bliss, late chief rate clerk.

AROUND THE FARM

Building Up the Soil.

During farmers' week in Burlington, Vt., says a correspondent of the American Cultivator, an expert of the United States department of agriculture, L. B. Dodge, spoke on the management of the dairy farm. He said New England farms did not produce as heavily as they should. This he attributed to lack of rotation of crops and to heavy feeding and cropping of pastures and meadows without adequate return of plant food; also to the waste of stable manure and its improper application.

A good rotation is corn, grain, clover. Hay land should be top dressed with stable manure, and best results are obtained by applying this little and often. Where land remains in grass a long time a light seeding of clover from time to time is beneficial, reseeding in summer after the hay crop has been removed.

Pastures may be top dressed and should not be grazed too early in spring nor too heavily. Where pastures can be plowed it is advisable to plow and reseed occasionally.

The raising of clover, corn and forage crops furnishes a larger amount of food for cattle, and less feed will need to be purchased.

The more fodder the more cattle can be kept, and there will be an increased amount of fertilizer to apply to the land.

Crops should not be sold that will carry a large amount of fertilizing elements off the farm.

Feeding Calves in Summer.

In warm weather calves should be kept in during the daytime and turned out during the evening, so as to avoid the hot sun and the flies. Whole or chopped corn should be fed a mixture of whole and cut corn. About a cupful twice a day for an ordinary sized calf that is on good pasture will be sufficient. For fall feeding until the roots are harvested there is nothing equal to green corn run through the cutting box and mixed with some chopped oats.

The main point in feeding is never to allow calves to stop growing and to keep beef animals always in good flesh. In feeding calves, as in every system of feeding, the extremes of over and under feeding are to be avoided. Continuous, regular, liberal feeding always brings the most profit and the best practical results.—D. C. Anderson.

Poultry Jettings.

A lack of clean, sharp grit is responsible for half the cases of bowel disease.

If eggs are the object don't overfeed on meat, but allow all the green food the hens will consume.

Poultry houses and runs that are kept clean the year around, disinfected often and never overcrowded with fowls are seldom infested with lice or other vermin.

A tablespoonful of sweet oil poured into the bird's mouth will often relieve a case of crop bound. After giving the oil gently knead the crop with the hand until it is softened.

An early morning meal will prevent many of the hens from stealing their nests out. The earlier the meal the better. Many of the hens will then visit the nests before starting out to forage.

Sugar Beets as a Stock Feed.

Stockman have long been of the opinion that a ration of mangels or sugar beets in some way causes kidney or bladder stones when fed for any length of time. To shed some light on this subject the Iowa experiment station has been carrying on some experiments in feeding mangels and sugar beets to hogs. The results of these experiments show conclusively that such feeding is attended with considerable danger and is almost sure to prove fatal if continued for any considerable period of time. For short fattening periods there is no particular danger, and the roots make a valuable addition to the ration.—Country Gentleman.

Amount of Grain on Pasture.

Growing or fattening pigs cannot be produced satisfactorily on pasture alone, but a grain ration is necessary. The Montana experiment station found that hogs fed a full grain ration on pasture gained on an average 120 pounds per hog per day and required 412 pounds of grain for 100 pounds of gain. Hogs fed a half ration of grain gained 98 pound per hog per day and required 291 pounds of grain for 100 pounds of gain. Thus it will be seen that the hogs fed a full grain ration on pasture made more rapid gains, but consumed much more grain for every 100 pounds of gain.

Spray For Potato Blight.

Potato blight is often very destructive to Irish potatoes. The plants should be sprayed every three weeks during growing season where blight is prevalent. A good formula for this purpose is copper sulphate (blue vitriol) four pounds, lime five pounds, water fifty gallons. Paris green may be added at the rate of one pound to fifty gallons of the mixture, when potato beetles and flea beetles will be destroyed as well as blight.—Farm and Ranch.

Oatmeal Soup.

Have three pints of broth—lamb, veal or chicken—nearly flavored with onion, celery, parsley, herbs and carrot; add one fourth of a cupful of oatmeal and stir until boiling. Let simmer an hour, then strain. When ready to serve stir in the yolks of two eggs beaten and mixed with half a cupful of cream. Do not let boil after the addition of the eggs.

CLEANING UP THE STREETS OF GRANVILLE

Commissioner Serrano Haines Does Efficient Work—News of the Classic Village.

Granville, July 8.—Under the able supervision of Serrano Haines, the efficient street commissioner, most commendable work has been done in the village during the past several weeks. Not only are the streets and alleys being kept in better condition than for several years past, but Mr. Haines and his associates have transformed Sugar Loaf Hill into a scene of beauty. Some of the back streets, however, where travel is not very heavy, have a considerable growth of weeds in the gutters. These should be removed. Owners of weed covered vacant lots and unsightly backyards should bear in mind that the rank vegetable growth on their premises is a menace to public health and should be removed. A little work now with the scythe and sickle may save a considerable outlay later on. Of course the public service department cannot be expected to mow all the weeds in town. As for private citizens, cutting weeds is not a matter of accommodation, but is a duty which, if not complied with, may have disastrous results. Disease lurks in the weeds which will soon fall and begin to decay—cut them now, then burn them, and the danger is averted.

The Denison Hiawatha Club will have its individual club this year, as there will be no federated organization. All members of the club and Denison students who expect to be at Hiawatha this summer should write at once to the secretary, Esther C. Nixon, Granville.

Mrs. Mary Peterson, who went to Dayton to attend the wedding of Miss Rosalie Peterson, who visited friends there for a week, has returned home.

Miss Blanche Horton, the efficient and painstaking operator at the telephone exchange, this place, after having been off for several weeks on account of sickness, has resumed her duties again. When the familiar voice of Miss Horton was heard answering calls, there was much thankfulness on the part of the subscribers. Miss Horton is certainly one of the most agreeable and accommodating operators that has ever been in the Granville exchange, and Granville people are all jubilant over the fact that she is again at the office.

Col. E. J. Case, who had the misfortune some days ago to have a small piece of iron rest lodge in his good eye, while he was engaged in repairing a wire fence on his farm on Burg street, north of the village, is reported as being in a very bad shape. Ever since the accident he has been suffering intense pain, and as he has been nearly blind for a long time in one of his eyes, his affliction is very severe. On Tuesday of this week he came down to Newark and consulted one of the best oculists there, but was given little encouragement. On Wednesday the colonel went over to Columbus and consulted one of the leading oculists there. The doctors are of the opinion that if they cannot save the injured eye, they can improve the sight of the other one. At this time Mr. Case is unable to see at all, he is suffering intensely from the af-

Mrs. Charles Watkins Thursday delightfully entertained the members of the Travelers' club of Granville at her cottage at Buckeye Lake. A large boat was chartered and the ladies were taken all over the lake, stepping and visiting at the most interesting places. A fine dinner was partaken of and all had a most enjoyable time.

WILLIAMS & EILBER

Will Open Merchant Tailoring Store in Arcade Next Month—Partnership Just Formed.

Edward Williams and William F. Eilber, both well known and popular in Newark, have just formed a partnership under the firm name of Williams & Eilber, and have leased room No. 8, Arcade, where on or about August 10 they will open a first class merchant tailoring establishment.

Both Mr. Williams and Mr. Eilber are practical workmen and are skilled in the art of making men's clothing, at which they have been engaged for years, though they have not heretofore been in business for themselves.

Williams & Eilber are about to let the contract for their fixtures, which will be of mission style and the room will be attractively fitted up for their business. They will have an upstairs workroom over their store. Their room is between the Erman drug store and the Busy Bee confectionery, on the north side of the Arcade.

WILL ENDEAVOR TO SECURE FINE LECTURE COURSE

A lecture course of ten lectures, consisting of six evenings will be given by American citizens within a few days, to be given under the joint direction of the Public Library and the Young Men's Christian Association. It is thought that people are interested and will subscribe for tickets to make sure of places, for the course will be the most valuable ever given in Newark, and will surely be of benefit to all over the county.

The talent provided will be as follows: Gov. Jos. W. Folk of Missouri, Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma, George L. McNair, the famous minister who became known as the "Dinner Phil" because he found his mission by joining the ranks of the industrial army of America. Dr. Peter McQueen of Boston, a world wide traveler, correspondent and orator. Gov. E. W. Hoch of Kansas and Victor M. Lind, the brilliant congressman who defended with cannon about some important things. Just such an array of men or more than national fame and of qualities as speakers and thinkers has never been in Newark on any course.

Six hundred tickets subscribed within the next three weeks will make sure of the success of this extraordinary enterprise, which is undertaken by the two organizations chiefly as a contribution to the life of the community. That men in Newark are taking an interest in national problems of the day, and they will welcome the discussion of even questions by such able men, in where they differ with them. Many things, is a pretty sure thing. The six men selected are all men who have "done things," not merely respect always accorded to earnest men even by those who honestly thing they are mistaken in some items. Their coming will supply an intellectual stimulus to even the clearest and best thinkers among the mature men of Licking county and the effect of such discussion upon the younger men will be most wholesome for many of them need to see the vision of the big things that need doing to win them from frivolous living or worse. Many of the most useful men of the country now trace the beginning of their usefulness to a lecture by John B. Gough or Henry Ward Beecher, or others of the old time platform, when it was one of the big institutions of education and inspiration to unselfish citizenship.

The contract for the appearance of these eminent men is conditioned on the subscribing for 600 season tickets, and this must be done within the coming three weeks. It will be a privilege rather than anything else to be offered the chance to make the course sure. If that number is pledged, the committee in charge will at once close the contract and arrange for the dates, the high school auditorium and all other things in connection with the enterprise. Should any profits accrue they will be divided between the Library and Y. M. C. A., but the purpose and opportunity of the course is not financial. It will be a big thing if it can be done as a contribution to the good citizenship of Newark, and of the country.

EMBROIDERED BATISTE.

Deep embroidered batiste flouncing in a delicate shade of lemon makes an ideal afternoon frock. If put together as shown in our sketch. The plain part of flounce used for bodice forms top of skirt, which joins the embroidered flounce through a double cording of the material. A flat, frilled collar finishes the neck and a flower rosette of natter blue velvet, placed over fastening of wrap, gives a chic touch of color.
